THE SALE OF UNNUMBERED

SHARES.

An interesting case was recently tried in Enc. land in which Laboran's Act was set up as a defunce to a claim by a firm of brokers in respect of certain shares purchased by them for a client. The Share Sales Regulation Ordinance of Hongkong is founded on Leeman's Acl, except that the former applies to shares fa general whereas the latter applies to Bank shares only. The Ordinance has not put un end to the traffic in unnumbered shares, and it remains to be seen whether any of these bargsins, which the law declares invalid, will be repudiated The case of Coates, Son and Co. v. Pacey was tried before Mr. Justice Vaughan Williams and a common jury on the 19th February. The results. following is the Times report :-

This was acase of considerable interest to tockbrokers and their clients, and arose out of a refusal of the defendant to carry out a purchase of shares in the English Bank of the River Plate which was alleged to have been entered into by the son of the defendant on behalf of his mother on the day before the failure of the bank. The defendant, besides denying the agreement to purchase these shares and the anthority of the son to act on her be all in this instance, set up the defence that what is known as Leamin's Act (30 and 31 Vict., chap. 29) had not been complied with-that is to say, the numbers of the shares were not entered in the contract note. Mr. Winch, Q.C., and Mr. Tindal Atkinson appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Candy C., and Mr. Macpherson for the defendant, After the case was opened to the jury, a dis cussion took place as to what was admitted with regard to previous transactions, and ultimately it was admitted that in all the ten pravious natances lu-which the son, Mr. R. M. Paccy with the authority of his mother, instructed the plaintiff to buy and sell shares the transactions were carried through, and that these took place between 1836 and July, 1891, and were the whole of the plaintiffs' transactions with Mrs. Pacey prior to July 17, 1891. Mr. Henry Charles Green examined, said he was a member of the London Stock Exchange His firm had received from time to time instructions from Mr. H. M. Pacey for the sale and purch use of shares for himself and for his mother. The bought and sold notes were always in the same form. They never contained the numbers of the shares. | Mr. Justice Vaughan Williams-The Stock Exchange bave repealed Leeman's Act. | No objection had been taken to the form of any of the contracts. On July 16 I received the order from Mr. Paccy, and the same evening the contract note was sent. The bank failed on July 17. The name day was July 29, and before that date Mrs. Pacey called with her son upon the plaintiffs. Mrs. Proev was told that the sinces had been bought for her or the instructions of her son; and that the firm would look to her on settling day to provide the money to complete the contract. Mrs. Pacey said she had not instructed her son to buy them. She offered to take money out of the bank to pay the amount necessary on account day if and we should be bound to pay this amount.] Cross-examined.—There was a liability for calls upon the shares. Our action was in measure due to the failure of the bank. I had never seen Mrs. Pacey till she called after July Shortly before this the defendant's son had bought and sold some of these shares at a profit, Mr. Coudy, having opened the case for the defence, called the defendant, Mrs. Pac-y, who. s rid that she was a widow. living at 22. Warwick street. She had invested money in shares, and had dealt with the plaintiffs through her son. She had authorized all previous transaction in which her name was given but not in this case. On the Monday after Jay 16 her son oame-to-her and said that he had but all his money through the failure of this bank. Mr. R. M. Pacey also gave evidence as to the various transactions with the plaintiffs, and, in cross-examination, said he wrote and ordered these shares in his mother's name. He could not say why he did not write in his own name.

He had recently bought and sold some of the shares of this bank. In no case were the numbors of the shares entered. These were to be bought in the same way as in previous transact Re-examined—He had no information that the state of the bank was shuky. There was a discussion as to what questions (if any) should be left to the jury, and His Lordship then summed up, and asked the jury to answer the following questions :-- First did the plaintiffs bonestly believe that the son had his mother's authority, and did they not reasoughly in assuming that he had such enthority: second, did the defendant, either herself or through her agent, know that the shares which were being purchased were shares without numbers; third, did she know the broker would be liable to perform the contract

The jury retired, and on their return answered the questions as follows: - First, yes; second we do not know; third, yes. The learned judge then further directed the jury, and asked them to reconsider the second questionand to Baswer the two parts separately, saving ground for charging Lord Kantsford with whether or not the defendant herself knew that the purchase which was to be made was of unnumbered shares, and did she know that she was buying in accordance with the rules of the that colony was made.
